I believe that the DOJ has taken a very soft approach to the Microsoft settlement, that the public will continue to pay for with reduced innovation and poorly designed products. I have been a student of the industry for years and find it hard to think of one real major concept that Microsoft was a true innovator.

The company puts out marginal products that would not be successful in a true competitive environment.

It is also clear to me the Netscape's browser was a victim of Microsoft's predatory practices and I feel that the DOJ has caved on this case.
